Lack of Unity Clear in Report

BY JOHN HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States, Britain and France have achieved at most only a shaky and uncertain co-operation in dealing with the Suez canal crisis. This is one of the most dangerous aspects of the situation because it weakens the heart of the Western alliance.

Responsible authorities con-ceded Saturday that the lack of strong and complete Western unity was apparent in the Suez night by Secretary of State on holding a Suez confere day night by Secretary of State Dulles.

Pinning his hopes on the Conference at London to set up international control of the canal, he refused to say what the United States may do in case the conference fails. No compitments have been given, he said.

While Britain and France went ahead preparing for a millitary showdown with Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser if necessary to secure the canal from his grip, Dulles reportedly barred his advisers from even considering auch a prospect. Apart from the Western spill beneath the surface agreement.

Dating Deadlines Worry Parents

Teen-agers have varying views on dating, but most of the girls, like pretty Rita Leong, 19-year-old Miss Victoria College, primping for a very special occasion, agree they should look their best when they go out for an evening .- (Colonist photo by Bud Kinsman.)

Victoria told The Daily Colonist they think they should be home by mid-night or 12.30 a.m. from a motion

And while some say they should be home from a dance or party by 1 or 2 a.m., a few agree with the 17-year-old girl who says: "Sometimes I get away with 230 or 3 a.m., but not very often."

Hamish Redford, 18, Oak Bay High, thinks the time a boy should take a girl home "cannot be set as a hard and fast rule because it depends on the day, the girl and the occasion."

day, the girl and the occasion.

An 18-year-old girl adds that the time is dependent on "where you go, what time you feel is a decent time after such entertainment— and when you're told to get in."

"This is a very touchy subject as Iar as parents go," she says.

"when things show signs of slow-ing up at a dame or party, it is then time to take leave," says Anne Frank-ham, 16, Victoria High school. "After a dance. I feel that you should be given ample time to go for eats, and deliver other members of the party home."

Surprisingly enough, most teen-agers either go steady or indicate a wish to do so, as, for example, a 16-year-old girl who said "I prefer to date with one person, but never seem to be able to find anyone with similar preferences."

One boy says he opposes going steady "unless the couple is really in love" but Nikki Chaston, 18, Oak Bay High school, says that going steady "gives both the parents and the two involved a better chance to know one proches."

"Some parents feel their children do not have the same opportunities to meet other people when they go steady as they would otherwise. In most cases. I would say that is wrong, because I know I met more people and made more friends than I would

One girl who went steady for a year says." Now I don't think I want to again," but adds. "This will pass, of course. I suppose."

Insurance for Fishermen

LABOR MINISTER GREGG has in formed the House of Commons of a forthcoming bill to extend the benefits of memployment insurance to fishermen, including those self-employed as well as men who work on shares or for wages. Thus ends in victory a campaign that has been waged for many years, and from which success has been withheld hitherto because of the difficulty of because of the difficulty of insuring a seasonal occupation subject to all the vagaries of the fish runs.

A plan deemed to be feasible must have evolved after all, but it will be interesting to hear the details. Insuring employees should not present too great difficulty in the matter of eligibility for benefits: but what about the others? When is a self-employed fisherman unemployed? When he isn't catching any fish? That could be due to all kinds of things, including lack of experience, poor judgment, and just plain disinclination to go out. If a fisherman's own boat is tied up in harbor because the engine won't start does that because the engine won't start does that constitute unemoloyment? And what is the situation if he is technically engaged in fishing but the catch is not enough to return a livelihood?

Saltwater fishing is probably the naro-est work that could be undertaken by any est work that could be undertaken by any man, exposed to dreadful weather and many dangers. Sometimes it yields big returns, but more often the fisherman has a hard time making ends meet. By all means he should enjoy the benefits provided for millions of others working under less arduous conditions, but it may take the wisdom of Solomon and then some to draft a workable set of rules. And however good they may look on paper, when some of the bureaucrats get hold of them the out-of-luck fisherman may find that some of the dureate set of the out-of-luck fisherman may find that there is a vast difference between theoretic eligibility, and hard cash.

It may be that this is not unemployment insurance in the literal sense, but a form of subsidy to bring earnings up to some pre-determined average. In that event the government may be establishing an awkward precedent when it comes to dealing with farmers and others. There is a parallel between self-employed fishermen and self-employed farmers; both are subject to seasonal influences and other uncontrollable factors. If the one can draw benefits why not the other—or for that matter all casual workers?

The Story of the Can-Scots

VALUABLE literary endeavor, of specific appeal to Victorians, is now under way-a history of the Canadian Scottish Regiment. This work undoubtedly will be of intense interest to thousands of local men who served or are serving in its ranks and to the community as a whole, for the Scottish have been an integral part of Victoria life for four decades and more. Theirs is a proud record which is overdue for the recital which has been unavoidably delayed since the last war until now. The Canadian Scottish stem from the 16th Battalion, CEF, of the First World War, which it has perpetuated since the recreanization of the Canadian militia in 1920. The 16th were the original "Can-Scots," as members of the regiment call themselves, and their battle-history of 1914-1918 was splendidly told in a book written by the late Colonel H. M. Urquhart, a colonel of the regiment. This new history will cover the years from 1920 until the present, including the fateful years of the 1st Battalion overseas between 1940 and 1945. The regiment expanded during the Second World War to four battalions and each of the others will have its due measure of service placed on record for all time. The post-war period since 1945 will also be dealt with. Altogether it will be a comprehensive history of permanent value to many Victoria households.

The notable part played by the regiment during the Normandy and Northwest Europe campaiens will naturally highlight the story, and it is in connection with this phase of the regiment's history that an appeal is being made for the kind of detail and incident that only the soldiers when tend years are recall. A perimental of detail and incident that only the solutions who took part can recall. A regimental history is a repository of rich human experience as well as a record of military accomplishment, and former members of the Scottish are invited to provide appropriate anecdote and data and personal stories for inclusion in the work. Lieutenest R. H. Roy an officer of the regiments. tenant R. H. Roy, an officer of the regiment and in civilian life on the staff of the Provincial Archives, is writing the history, and will welcome all contributions.

Consideration for Travellers

COMMENDATION is due to the provincial department of forests for the promptness of all its actions during the present fire season. In May and again this week the department closed the woods to campers and travellers when the danger of fire reached a critical point, but did not apply that drastic restriction any sooner than conditions demanded. On both occasions the forest service was just as quick to lift the closure the moment it became safe to do so, acting on Thursday within a few hours of the heavy overnight As a result the closure caused very little inconvenience. The depart-ment's first concern is protection of the forests, but it is anything but overbearing and travellers should be grateful for the consideration invariably shown them.

At the last federal-wide census, in 1951, the British percentage was 46.7 and the French 31.6.

These Labor members, it should be pointed out, were the gentlemen who when in office nat-tionalized the British railways, the coal mines and public utility companies. They did not consult the shareholders. They laid down their own terms. It was avowed socialist

Colonel Nasser has done exactly the same thing with the Suez Canal.

A stroke of the pen

The Suez Canal Company is an Egyptian company with many allen shareholders including the British government, but it is still an Egyptian company. It is difficult to see why, if it is just for the socialists to nationalize British railways it is lpso facto unjust for the Egyptian gov-ernment to nationalize the Suez Canal.

The point, of course, is that na-tionalization has implications. The anxiety of the British government is primarily fear that the convention 1888 guaranteeing freedom from blockade and passage to all' vessels in peace or war may be abrogated. There is also the aubsidiary financial at nearly £36,000,000 and the annual dividend has been equal to nearly two-thirds of the purchase price.

The suggestion that Egypt may offer to buy out shareholders at original cost has an ironic touch to it, but if they follow socialist prin-ciples of nationalization in this country they will merely offer Egyptian bonds in place of the original capital carrying 3 per cent interest. That is what the socialists did with our railways and no "please" or "thank you." It will be interesting to note their reactions in parliament it the Egyptian formula is similar.

* * * The political issue is, of course far more serious. If Egypt follows nationalization with the abrogation of the convention it would give Egypt a temporary stranglehold on European industry by inflating costs, as European oil passes through the Suez Canal. If it was stopped, or if tolls were made probibitive, the effect on industry would be serious. But mean ships are passing through the

As a matter of fact there is some argument as to whether the effects would be as serious as some critics believe. Some of the big tanker con panies saw the writing on the wall before the government. We have seen the launching of some fabulously large tankers and these vessels are able to make non-stop journeys round the Cape without the need to call at any intermediate port. It is doubtful whether the running costs would be very much higher than for the passage through the canal. Ef-ficient modern ships can steam four or five days for the cost of canal

In emergency the Suez Canal has never been very helpful. In 1942, for example only one ship passed through the canal for every dozen which passed through last year. The approaches to the terminals in the Red Sea and the Mediterranean are too easily intimidated to make any sense of the convention. It has been patent to most observers that who-ever controls Egypt controls the canal-but not the approaches.

Recent developments in connection with faulty piers and the increased cost of steel have placed the original cost of the new structure in an entirely different light. Further expense should be withheld until there is no doubt that the cost will not exceed the sum permitted by the by-law, else it is liable to involve the taxpayers to an obligation comparable to the Memorial Arena.

There are several important reasons. Pirst is the undetermined cost, which is apeculative at the present time, here are involve property owners in increased laxes for years. Secondly, it is located at a point of risk, being in a direct line approximately 2.500 feet from the Johnson street bridge, which would make it a sitting duck target in case of hostilities and could present an added block to the inner harbor in case of destruction. Thirdly, the length, being close to 500 feet, adds largely to the cost without compensating benefit to the city, when there is another location that could be used to provide greater benefits to Victoria West and the city side of the Gorge waters.

The City of Victoria is bearing the whole cost and I think that the greatest benefit to the city itself should receive most consideration. There is a narrows in the Gorge above the CNR trestle which is between 175 and 225 feet across, according to the point selected, which could be used to connect Gorge road with Victoria West, and could be crossed with a single span with abutments on each bank and the possibility of incorporating a scheme for locks to improve the Gorge waters at a future date.

There is little doubt that Victoria would be best served with a bridge in this location, in a more valuable manner than the Point Ellice site, also relieving traffic congestion to and from the new Island highway. The saving in cost would also be a major item.

I respect, the sincerity of our civic leaders who have endorsed and urged the ratepayers to finance a new Point Ellice bridge, but I feel that they should be generous enough to admit that it may have been a mistake and appreciate the weakness that the undertaking is faced with before it is too late.

interesting light on the differences between adolescents on the American continent and those in Europe.

Basically, I suppose, a Canadian teen-ager has more in common with a Scottish teen-ager than a Canadian adult; the physio-logical and psychological problems of ado-tescence are the same all over what we laughingly call the rivured worse.

The superficial differences, which attract all the attention, are due to the greater freedom and wealth which North American youth enjoys.

This comparative wealth enables local teenagers to inculge a taste for bright plumage, noisy motorcars and cotifures as laborious as they are speciacular. Yet there is little that can be said against today's youth that cannot be said with equal force against the youth of the prosperous twenties.

happens very gradually.

I have witnessed more than my share of summer drama recently, and I can't say that nothing happens in them — mostly, something does—but very gradually. Or maybe it just seems very gradually because I've seen so many of them over quite a few summers.

For instance, there is the night of the carnival story. There is this young girl who, as the saying goes, is just awakening to life and one night the carnival comes to town, the biggest event in Podunk since they built the railroad through there. The awakening girl meets the gay blade who sells rides on the carnusel and suddenly she perceives that there is a rich.

The trouble is that I dis-tinctly recall other carnival dramas with exactly the op-posite point of view; the gay blade who sells tickets to the carousel suddenly sees that carousel suddenly sees that Podunk has the rich, nourishing values, that his life chasing from town to town with the carnival is just a lot of lawdry tinsel, that what he really wants is to article down and watch the little woman make lace curtains for the parlor.

Now I can adjust to either one of these points of view. It's adjusting to both that comes hard.

The power hungry coastal region is now looking to the Columbia river as its next possible hydro source, and this is all right with the fisheries people because this river has already been rulined for flasheries by the massive U.S. power dams nearer the month.

It could be that the building of a massive dam at Mica Creek—near the most northerly part of the Big Bend—will be sufficient to meet B.C.'s power needs for many years to come. This, however, might not be strictly the case, for Mica would be primarily a storage dam for the benefit.

So it may be that with shortages, definitely booming B.C. will be forced into other hydro projects including those of the far north and of the fish-important Fraser river.

For power convenience the Fraser is the apple in the eye of the power seconds.

Heads of packing houses down to the humble gill netter turn from green to apoplectic red at the very mention of the word Moran. So far, the Moran engineers have not been able to convince everyone that they can build their dam and still save the precious sockeye salmon bound for Stuart lake and the Chillso. Headed for the Arctic

Heading for adventure is Mrs. A. F. Flucke, who left Victoria with her husband on Saturday headed for the leastern Arctic. Neither Mr. or Mrs. Flucke have experienced an Arctic winter before although Mr. Flucke is a native of Northern Saskatchewan and feels he may be better enumped than a native Victorian like his wife. The Fluckes get compared for their timp to the north-land. Mr. Flucke has taken a position as Northern service Officer with the federal department of Northern Af-fairs. Unit, leaving he was with the Provincial Archives here. (Photo by Bud Kinsman)

The important hat that is a hat continues for Fall . . . but now modified in size, often worn to show the brow ... and best of all, given a new and flattering softness. It's a softness that comes from artful draping or gentle blousing, in new treatments of materials and trims to achieve height or width . . . creating, actually, new shapes out of familiar silhouettes. Toques are molded to drape high . . . cloches are encircled with soft fabrie ... crowns are bloused onto brims, or the reverse :.. and there are new, face-framing contours that lift the hat away from the brow in fresh, youthful lines. All in all, these are the most exciting hats in years ... and they are here NOW
